Publisher's Foreword

There is a definite need for this book by schools, teachers, students, translators, and anyone intent upon studying Tagalog.

The main objectives of this dictionary are simplicity, facility of reference, and accuracy. The Tagalog equivalents in the dictionary have been selected for their accuracy of meaning, but in some cases, because of translation difficulties, it has been necessary to sacrifice accuracy in favor of closeness or nearness in meaning. However, the orthography of the Tagalog meanings conforms with the rules of the official grammar published by the Institute of National Language.

Pronunciation and Accentuation

To understand quickly the accentuation system used in this book, which is the same as that prescribed by the Balarilà of the Institute of National Language, consider two important things: STRESS and GLOTTAL STOP.

STRESS means syllabic emphasis. It is marked by the acute accent (á) on the vowel of the syllable, on whichever syllable the stress falls, except on the penultimate which does not need to be marked because majority of Tagalog words are penultimate. (It is important to note that when a word has no accent mark at all in its last two syllables, it is penultimate in stress).

1. Acute stress (i. e. on the last syllable):—Buháy, talagá, hambóg, maliít.
2. Penultimate stress (i. e. on the syllable before the last),—no accent mark:—buhay, aral, pato, sabí, laganap, dalaga.
3. Stress on a syllable before the penultimate (i. e. on the third, fourth, etc.. syllable before the last):—(a) in combination with the penultimate: táhanan, simulain, ná-rárapat, mákita;—(b) in combination with the acute stress: káwanihán, kágawarán, náririyán, náririto.

NOTE WELL: The acute accent marks ONLY the syllabic stress.

GLOTTAL STOP refers to the end-vowel of a word that is pronounced with an arrested sound at the epiglottis. The accent mark used is the grave accent (à). This particular accent is found in words with the glottal end-vowel but penultimate in stress:—Batà, binatà, luhà, labì, turò, paglalaho.

But, (and this is important) if a word of acute stress happens to end also in a glottal vowel, we get, first: the acute accent (á) for the stress, and second: the grave (à) for the glottal end-vowel, which results into a combination which we call the circumflex accent because of its similarity to the accent of the same name in international phonetics: (â).—dagtâ, sirâ, bintî, panibughô, buslô.

The importance of understanding the system of accentuation as guide to correct pronunciation cannot be minimized. It would solve many problems, among them the following:

1. We would not have to grope for the correct pronunciation of a word.
2. Non-Tagalog Filipinos and foreigners trying to learn the language would have a clear guide to correct pronunciation.
3. Uniformity of pronunciation throughout the nation would result, as there are many localisms and regional idiosyncracies which education should remove in favor of a national standard.

We should bear in mind that there are a great number of Tagalog words that change in meaning by a change in accent. Take this sentence which Prof. Lope K. Santos, Director of the Institute of National Language, habitually presents to his students:

Lalaki ang aso. The dog is male.—Without accent marks on lalaki and aso they are to be pronounced as penultimate words. Lalaki means “male” or “masculine”. Aso means “dog.”—If we should use stress accents on lalaki to make it lálaki, the word becomes the future tense form of the infinitive lumáki, to grow big. Thus, Lálaki ana aso would mean "The dog will grow big."—Let us also put an acute stress on aso, to become asó, smoke. Lálaki ang asó means "The smoke will grow big." Of course, it would be ridiculous to write: Lalaki ang asó because no smoke is ever masculine in the Tagalog language, although we say "el humo" in Spanish.

Observe the differences in meaning in the following groups of words:

1. kaibigan, friend
kaibigán, desire, inclination, preference káibigán, mutual consent kaibigan, sweetheart, boy-friend or girl-friend
2. baga, glowing ember
bagá, (an interrogative particle) bagà, lungs
bagâ, tumor in the breast
3. buhay, life
buháy, alive
4. kita, earnings; seen, obvious, conspicuous
kitá, (pronoun with a compound meaning, I to you)
5. bata, Spanish word used in Tagalog meaning "robe", especially "bathrobe", or other robes used while at home
batà, child
batá, root-word for a verb, as magbatá, to suffer.

The mastery of Tagalog is mastery of stresses and glottal vowels, aside from understanding of sentence structures. But any one trained in some language, as English or Spanish, at school or elsewhere, and having a sense of expression, would be able to construct sentences. It is not everyone that can pronounce correctly according to standard pronunciation,—even in languages other than Tagalog,—until he has become familiar with what is standard. For the sake of uniformity, the initiative of the Institute of National Language should be considered authoritative, as it certainly is by law. The INL we understand bases the standard pronunciation upon the preferences of literate Manila, which is the metropolitan in which all Tagalogs of differing accents meet and in which certain mannerisms gain a more or less permanent foothold. We must have a standard,—and Manila being the sea where all rivers meet, let us take the resulting taste and consistency of the sea.

Tagalog Word Forms

Much of the vocabulary of the student of Tagalog could be built quicker and easier if the student should try to master the different word structures. The following is intended to show briefly how words are formed in Tagalog.

First, we consider the particles (katagâ) which are mostly monosyllabic words that have no meaning in themselves when alone but become definite parts of speech when combined with other words. Among such words are: din (rin), man (namán), pa, na, ngâ; the postpositive pronouns ka, ko, mo, niyá, etc.

Second, the root-words, mostly disyllabic but some have more than three syllables and only a few monosyllabic. All these root-words are used to form reduplicated, affixed, and compound words, but the majority of them can stand as single parts of speech.—bahay, lupà, lasa, sugat, bulak-lák, lagari, etc.

Third, the reduplicated words, in which a syllable, two syllables, or the whole word is repeated—Lálaki, magandá-gandá, mabuting-mabutì.

Fourth, the affixed word formed by either a prefix, infix, or suffix added to a root-word, or by any two or all of the affixes with the root. Prefixed: mabuhay, pagawâ, manggamót. Infixed: kiñatawán, binalimbíng, tumayô. Suffixed: ubuhín, lutuin, tawanan, tamaan. Prefixed and infixied: kINakasama, ipINagágawâ. Prefixed and suffixed: magsálitaan, pagtawanán, pabilhín, katulungin. All affixes: pagpUMilitan, pINakikinggán, kINatátayuán.

Fifth, the compound word, in which two different words or roots are combined (a) in literal sense, without losing the original meanings of the combined words: buhay-

Maynilà, dalagang-bukid, bahay-parì; (b) in the figurative sense, i. e., losing the original meaning of the combined words in favor of a third: hampaslupà, Bagumbayan, dala-gambukid.

As in the changes in accentuation, changes in word structure also produce many shades of meaning.

bahay, house

bahay-bahay, every house

magbahay, to own or build a house pagbahayan, to build a house (on a certain place)

kabahay, fellow living in the same house kabahayan, the central portion of a house

mamahay, to reside in pamamahay, household

bahay-parì, convent, monastery

bahay-batà, uterus

bahay-langgám, ant-hill

bahay-hari, royal palace

bahay-bayan, public house

bahay-sanglaan, pawnshop

bahay-kalakal, business house

maybahay, housekeeper, wife etc., etc.

The foregoing list gives only a few that can be formed out of the root-word bahay. Majority of Tagalog roots can be transformed agglutinatively into scores of other words with different meanings, with the root as the central relation.

How to Use this Book

Facility of reference and real utility can be obtained from any vocabulary or dictionary if the user is familiar with its organization and structure. This vocabulary, being a bilingual presentation, and having been prepared with a certain point of view, has its own characteristic organization of materials somewhat different from other books of the same kind. The user, therefore, is advised to study the following explanations of organization and structure.

1. The English entries are immediately followed by their respective parts of speech.

CORNER, n. sulok.

DISOBEY, v. sumuwáy, suwayín.

See the list of abbreviations for these parts of speech.

2. After the part of speech, the Tagalog equivalent or equivalents follow, but if the original entry has no exact correspondence in Tagalog, or can be interpreted in some other meanings, secondary English key-words are provided. In this way, accuracy is achieved.

CRUSH, v. to break into pieces or flatten by pressure, pisain;
grind to powder, ligisin; squeeze with the fingers or the hand,
pisilin; pulverize, durugin.

3. If the English entry belongs to two or more parts of speech, a dash (—) separates the second or third part of speech from the first. Often, an idiomatic combination or common expression using the entry is given. In this case, the entry is printed with its initial letter alone, to save space.

CROSS, n. kurús, krus, Sp.—v.
To mark with a c., kurusán.—
to move to the opposite side, tumawid; tawirín.—To make the sign of the c., mag-antandá.—
adj. ill-tempered, mainit ang ulo.

4. If a "Tagalog" equivalent is not really Tagalog but derived from a foreign language, the abbreviation of the language of derivation follows the word.

DEAN, n. decano, Sp.
GERM, n. seed, binhî; sprout,
paltók, (of mongos, toge, tawge, Ch.); microbe, mikrobyo, Sp.;
origin, pinagmuán.

Some of the words in our national language are derived from the Latin (Lat.), French (Fr.), Chinese (Ch.), Arabic (Ar.), Hebrew (Heb.). Words from the Malay are not marked. The reason is that we have no authoritative reference at present to allow us to make such indications. Old Tagalog words being revived or resuscitated are marked "O.T." Tagalog terms not in common use but deemed needed are indicated by "nc." Coined words which the author considered as possibly useful are followed by "cw."

5. Technical terms belonging to a particular branch of science or art are introduced by the name of the branch of science or art in parentheses, as (Gram.) Grammar, (Bot.) Botany, etc.

GENDER (Gram.) kasarian.—
Feminine g., kasariang pambaba. — Masculine g., kasariang pantalaki.

6. Often, to save space and too much repetition, or to indicate slight differences under the same meaning, secondary key-words in English are presented in parentheses:

ACQUIRE, v. (by self-exertion)
mátamó, makuba; (by purchase) mábili; (by inheritance) mámana.
CAPE, n. wrap, abrigo, Sp.; head-land (narrow), lungos; (short) imus; (high) tangos; (wide and long) tangwáy.

Acknowledgments

THE original and main part of this vocabulary was prepared in several periods. At the start, in 1941, the suggestions and aid of Dr. Eufronio M. Alip proved useful. The interest displayed and the critical suggestions of Rev. Fr. Evergisto Bazaco, O.P., in the preparation of the letter "A" helped the author to a great extent in finding a "foothold" so-to-speak.

When Japan bombed Pearl Harbor on December 8, 1941, the manuscript, completed until letter "C", evacuated with the author to the Barrio of Bungkalot, Tanauan, Batangas. The author's advisers became the old people of the barrio and transient evacuees. From March, 1942, Mrs. Fidela C. de Panganiban, the author's mother; Mrs. Consuelo T. Panganiban, the author's better-half; and Mrs. Leonila L. Torres, acted as advisers and consultants, although very little work was done.

In 1943, back in the city, the author availed himself of the many suggestions and advices of Maj. Jose M. Hernandez, P.A., Mr. Antonio Zacarias, and Dr. Eufronio M. Alip. In 1944, after an interview with Director Lope K. Santos of the Institute of National Language, the manuscript (though at this time had reached until letter "M") was revised with a new organization of material. Director Santos and Mr. Julian Cruz Balmaseda provided the author with valuable suggestions at this time.

After the first bombing of the Port of Manila by the Americans in September, 1944, the author and his family evacuated to Tanauan, Batangas. Work on the manuscript became more intensive. The late Dr. Brigido Carandang, believed to have been killed by the Japanese early in 1945, made it a habit to look in at the author at work, to read the manuscript and ridicule some entries. The good doctor's ridicule helped the author a great deal in improving the work.

When, after Christmas of 1944, the Japanese airfield at Lipa and the railroad station at Tanauan became the object of daily air-raids by the Americans, the author and his family evacuated with the manuscript to Barrio Wawang Balili, near Lake Taal, within sight of Taal Volcano and Tagaytay City on the famous ridge of Cavite. Once again, the author had a chance to consult natural "Tagalists", among them the barrio headman Mang Atong Salisi; Mr. Dionisio Atienza, an ex-teacher; and various other persons, natives and evacuees.

The manuscript was on letter "S" when the 11th Airborne Division of the U.S. Army landed paratroops on Tagaytay and the author was called upon by local guerrillas to act as Liaison Officer in meeting the paratroopers. In February, 1945, the massacre of the towns of Santo Tomas, Tanauan, and Lipa, by the Japanese occurred. With thousands of other evacuees, the author, with his manuscript carefully packed under one arm and food for a few days under another, fled across hills and forests to Cabuyao, Laguna, guarded by a guerrilla band captained by the gallant Remigio Maiquis who had the presence of mind to hide under some bushes the Royal typewriter (specially equipped with Tagalog accents) on which the author wrote the manuscript. When the Japanese burned and razed the barrio of Wawang Balili to the ground, among the few things saved from the barrio was the said typewriter.

Back in Manila by March, 1945, work on the manuscript was resumed with the constructive suggestions of Mr. Vicente Sabalvaro and Atty. Teodoro L. Valencia, while the author worked for PCAU 20, and later, for the Military Censorship Detachment, USAFFE. The manuscript was completed by June, 1945.

At this time, Mr. Arsenio R. Afan saw the manuscript which had reached over 1,400 pages. Mr. Afan was instrumental in interesting Dr. Jose M. Aruego of the University Publishing Company who asked for an abridgment of the work in order to produce a low-priced vocabulary.

The manuscript had to be rewritten, therefore, to meet the requirement of the publishers, and in this preparation the help of Mrs. Antonia H. Villanueva proved very valuable. When, finally, the manuscript went to press, the proofs were gone over by Director Lope K. Santos, Mr. Marcelo P. Garcia, Mr. Leonardo Dianzon, and Mr. Leonardo C. Paner. Mrs. Paulina Flores Hidalgo and Miss Aurea Mercado went over the final printed sheets for errata which are corrected in this second printing.

As may be seen, hundreds of people had a hand in the preparation of this small vocabulary. To all these people, the author hereby expresses his thanks and acknowledges sincerely their aid, without which this book could not have found itself published in the way it is.

APPENDIX B

COMMON AFFIXES

Simple Rules for Affixation

The student should bear in mind that a great wealth of vocabulary can be within easy reach if he or she understands the meaning of the affixes and masters the rules for affixation.

1. Prefixing.—The general rule for prefixing is simply place a prefix before a root-word.—tagabundók, matao, malakanin, palábiró.

a. If a prefix ends in a consonant and the root-word to be attached begins with a vowel, requiring a slight pause in pronunciation between, a hyphen should be used.—pag-asa, mag-arial, mang-abala, tag-ulán. Exceptions are in prefixes ending in -ng in which the pronunciation of -ng is combined with the initial vowel of the root: pangaral, mangibig, pangulo, etc.

b. Root-words that begin with a capital letter require a hyphen when a prefix is attached to them.—maka-Pilipino, tagá-Batangan, pang-Paskó.

c. Prefixes ending in -ng are governed by the following rules:

(1) The -ng ending is retained before root-words whose initial letters are the vowels a, e, i, o, u, and the consonants, k, g, h, m, n, ng, w, and y.—pang-aso, mang-ipit, panggamót, mangharang, pangmaramí, pangnamám, pangngalan, pangwakás, mangyari. NOTE: The consonant k of the root-word disappears: pang+kuhit, panguhit; mang+kalat, mangalat.

(2) The -ng ending becomes -n before root-words that begin with d, l, r, s, and t.—Mandurukot, magkanluluhód, panrigalo, sansinukob, santinakpán.— Sometimes the initial s or t disappears: pansulat (panulat); mantahí (manahí).

2. Infixing.—There are really only two infixes,—um-, and -in-. Both are usually inserted after the first consonant of the root-word.—tumawa, sinaing. NOTE: In certain verbs the infix ni is used after the prefix i, inhabol.

3. Suffixing. — There are two sets of suffixes.—an, -in and -han, -hin.

a. -AN and -IN are suffixed to root-words that end in consonants and the glottal vowel.—Balutan, hulaan, bilangin, batiin.

b. -HAN and -HIN are suffixed to root-words that end in the liquid vowel.—Samahan, ubuhin.

c. The following are irregular forms of suffixiation:

(1) The use of -nan or -nin instead of -han or -hin after certain words that end in a liquid vowel: tawanan (instead of tawahan); kunin, from kuhanin (instead of kuhahin).

(2) The omission of a vowel or a syllable of the root-word upon taking a suffix.—alsán (from alisán), dakpín (from dakipín), dalhán (from dalahan) hipan (from hihipan), alaalahin (from alaalahin), halinhán (from halilihan), kilanlín (from kilalahin or kilalanin).

ENGLISH
TAGALOG DICTIONARY

Today the number of people studying Tagalog, the national language of the Philippines, is greater than ever before. This volume addresses the growing need for a concise, reliable, and inexpensive English-Tagalog dictionary. It is ideal for teachers, students, businesspeople, travelers, and others who are interested in studying Tagalog.

The key to understanding Tagalog is a thorough familiarity with the stresses, glottal vowels, and basic vocabulary of the language, all of which are treated in this book. Pronunciation guidelines were determined by the Institute of National Language, which based its preferences on standard Manila dialect.

Used in conjunction with Basic Tagalog for Foreigners and Non-Tagalogs, also published by Tuttle Publishing, this dictionary is an indispensable tool to those learning Tagalog.
